

STUDY AREA

Bandon, West Cork, is a growing regional town with a population of 8,196 (Census 2022), located approximately 30 km southwest of Cork City. Its role as both a commuter town and gateway to West Cork makes public transport accessibility an important consideration for residents and visitors.

KEY MESSAGE

The public transport network is concentrated around the established town settlement, creating the spatial baseline for the core-periphery pattern developed through the remaining analysis. Peripheral residential areas are more spatially separated from the principal stop locations and therefore require closer examination of network access.
